Open a business: Many millionaires have become millionaires by starting their own business. Don't expect it to be you let your employees do all the work and you sit back and enjoy the endless stream of cash. You already failed if you think it will be that easy. It will take hard work and long hours, but if you are passionate and persistent in what you offer/produce than you have a good of shot as any.

Have a strong skill set: You will need to have a quite a few skills in order to make a good income. Develop skills that are desirable such as charisma, creatively, leadership, etc. Whether you are working for yourself or an employer having certain skills will push you to the head of the herd and with that comes more money.

Sell to and untapped market: If you want to earn a good income than a good idea might be to research an untapped market/niche. If you want to market to the mainstream crowd it can be pretty stiff competition, but marketing toward a certain niche (such has makeup to cover tattoos) means you have a better chance of being seen/heard.

Surround yourself with smart/trustworthy people: Surrounding yourself with a support group and people with the same goal in mind is something everyone should have. In fact networking with other millionaires is a great idea because you can pick their brain (Mike Dillard from the Elevation Group did just that).

Work hard: If the above examples of how to become a millionaire hasn't convinced you that it will be hard, then... IT WILL BE HARD. You will have to work hard if you want to achieve your goal to become a millionaire in 5 years.
