(Newswire.net -- January 15, 2013) London, UK -- Although London has escaped the brunt of the floods this week many residents are still preparing for the worst. Londoners remember when just a few months ago in June whole blocks of flats were evacuated and many personal possessions were ruined beyond repair.

This is the reason one company is seeing a surge of requests for their House Clearance service as those that have been flooded before are taking great steps to preserve their belongings by putting the most important items in storage.

The main items include personal belongings that no insurance company can replace such as family heirlooms of furniture, photograph albums, boxes of children's school work and much more. However, it's not just the house clearance service that has prompted London residents to pick up the phone to Anyclean.

Their end of tenancy cleans, new home cleans and builders cleans are also becoming popular. It is unusual for the end of tenancy cleans to be sought after at this time of the year as studies show this is time when moving house grinds to a halt, however with more rain predicted many tenants are now fearing that they may be victim of a very wet Christmas and are preparing for the worst.

The after builders cleans are popular with those that were flooded in the summer as work has almost completed on getting these flats and houses back to a dry standard of living.

Nick Vassilev the founder of Anyclean is surprised by this sudden surge he says, "Normally this is the season where our after party cleans and carpet cleaning services are in demand around Christmas as some people host parties at home and others want their home to look fresh and clean for Christmas day. We were lucky to escape the floods this week but it shows that Londoners are worried about this happening again as we've been called out to many houses where residents have no option to move because if they become flooded again they won't be able to find insurance to cover their costs. It is a shame but it's also quite heart-warming when we meet them at their new home and know they are going to have a safe and dry Christmas."
