Carpet Cleaning - CarpetFirst Offer Health Related January Cleans

Nick Vassilev January 18, 2013

Carpet Cleaning

CarpetFirst report that December has been an extremely busy month already with residential and commercial customers alike being keen to spruce up their carpets and upholstery to make it look and feel better before the onslaught of Christmas guests. January therefore finds many customers ready for additional cleaning having had an influx of extra foot traffic through their home or communal business areas.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

(Newswire.net -- January 18, 2013) London, UK -- CarpetFirst report that December has been an extremely busy month already with residential and commercial customers alike being keen to spruce up their carpets and upholstery to make it look and feel better before the onslaught of Christmas guests. January therefore finds many customers ready for additional cleaning having had an influx of extra foot traffic through their home or communal business areas.

CarpetFirst are urging customers to not delay in booking in for a January "New Year Clean" as space is now limited therefore customers may be disappointed if they do not arrange an appointment soon.

The focus from CarpetFirst's point of view is that the January clean is not only to reverse the damage to carpets and upholstery during the busy festive season; it is also to enable customers to start the year off in a significantly healthier way.

With the vast majority of carpets and upholstery items containing higher dust mite allergen concentration which have been known to affect asthma suffers or those with allergies, a deep carpet and upholstery clean is not only a cosmetic solution, it is a health related one too.

Sissy Tasheva, the CarpetFirst Operations Manager says, "The build-up of dust mites in any home or business premises may prove to trigger certain respiratory ailments or skin irritations which clearly is something that needs to be avoided. After the busy Christmas period, carpets are more likely to need an extra service to eliminate to dirt caused by high levels of foot traffic during wet and muddy periods. Taking this time to ensure that the carpets and upholstery items are also deep cleaned, either with our through hot water extraction method or dry cleaning for older fabrics and piles, starts the year off allergen free and altogether fresher".

The CarpetFirst staff is highly trained in the most appropriate way to clean any piece so that customers may be confident that their carpets and suites are in safe hands. All employees are of course fully insured too therefore clients are able to enjoy complete peace of mind while their home or business is being given an early spring clean.

To contact CarpetFirst to obtain a no-obligation quote for any of the carpet and upholstery cleaning services on offer in January, and to take advantage of the professional and quality service their highly trained staff provide call 020 8099 8444 or email via the website at http://www.carpetfirst.co.uk.

Editor's Note:

For Press and Interviews please contact: Sissy Tasheva - Operations Manager

78 York Street London W1H 1DP https://plus.google.com/107131204074651237872/posts