Pain Block topical pain relief cream was invented by board certified anaesthesiologist and prolotherapy specialist Dr. Howard Rosen of Orange County, California—after suffering a neck injury in a car accident in 1997. When conventional, physiotherapy and chiropractic treatment failed to fully relieve the mobility and pain issues; he decided to design a product that would effectively block the pain without the unwanted side effects. The resulting product was Pain Block©.

Prolotherapy (proliferation therapy) treatment works by enhancing the body's natural ability to heal itself through the proliferation of new cells in the specific area of the body via multiple injections. Prolotherapy involves deep penetration using needles and a prolo solution and until recently, this was the only effective method to reap the benefits of prolotherapy, until Dr. Rosen found that topical application using ultrasound is similarly effective in blocking nerve pain transmitters called C-fibers. This was the beginning of the research that led Dr. Rosen to incorporating skin penetrating agents to the cream to carry the helpful formula to the pain sources and go to work.

Customers attest to the efficacy of Pain Block. "I am always looking for tools which speed the process of my patient's recovery. Patient referrals, insurance reimbursement and most importantly, my patient's belief in my work are all dependent on fast and observable results," said physical therapist Kurt Burghardt. "I recently began a trial use of pain block gel in my clinic and was expecting to use it in a limited manner as an alternative to standard ultrasound or phonophoresis. I am very impressed with the results. I am observing significant reduction in tendon pain, reduction of strain/sprain symptoms, and even significant decreases in trigger finger pain/locking with palpable reduction in the tendon nodule within one to two treatments. My chronic pain patients report decreases in pain immediately following application. Pain levels are typically reduced by at least 50% and many times 75-90% often immediately and often within one to two treatments. This modality definitely makes my job easier."

"The patients are impressed and this is the best referral system we have as therapists. In a field that has many treatment options, this is quickly becoming my 'go-to' modality," Burghardt added.
