Moving time is full of stress. Hiring the right movers can make the experience of relocation more bearable.

(Newswire.net -- January 4, 2017) -- Yes, selecting the right mover can definitely be a tough task considering the 9,800 complaints received by the Better Business Bureau about movers in the country. As per reports lodged to BBB, majority of the complaints stemmed from damaged or lost baggage but there were also charges done for un-worked hours, not honouring the estimates and arriving late on the list. In order to avoid all such issues while moving, it is better to choose the right moving company which is not only reputable and trustworthy but also has the largest number of satisfied clients. Among the numerous packers and movers Sydney companies available, how are you supposed to select the right one? Here is a guide to help you out.

- Getting enough recommendations for local real estate agents

How about asking co-workers, friends and local real estate agents about some recommendations on the best companies in the locality? You could even get a personal estimate of how much the move will cost you. Don't depend on any kind of estimate which is suggested by someone whom you don't know. Never make the mistake of relying on big shot companies which are the best. Don't get estimates through websites which provide you help about hunting for a mover.

- An initial screening is necessary for homeowners

When there's a list of recommended movers, you should go online and make a quick check about the background. You can log on to the website of Better Business Bureau and call or mail the Moving and Storage Association to check whether or not the moving company is a member. This will mean that the company will abide by the tariffs of the organization. Also check some of the consumer advocacy websites so that you even get a list of e blacklisted companies.

- Review the estimate

After the estimator comes to your home and you show him everything, you should review the estimate. When you sign the document, make sure you check the words "written binding estimate" and the mover's signature with the date at the bottom. In case you're opting for an interstate move, the estimate should include in detail the quantity and type of goods that you're shipping and the distance from your new home. If you think you're not sure about anything about the estimate, get it written and allow the company to send it to you.

- Ensure the company has license and insurance

Last but not the least, you need to check whether or not the moving company is offering you the right insurance coverage for moving your goods. Even if you seek help of a commercial carpet cleaning Sydney company, you will have to check their license and such is the case with your movers company as well.

Therefore, if you've been wondering about the ways in which you can hire a professional moving company, you can take into account the above mentioned points. Don't make the mistake of choosing the wrong company as it can spoil your move.
