Domestic Cleaning - TSD Cleaning Services Focus on Chemical Safety

Nick Vassilev January 21, 2013

There is a keen focus this week in the cleaning sector on a new tool-kit that will take over the labeling of chemical substances. This new pictorial method of ensuring that workers and employers are able to easily see and understand the specific hazards of using each chemical has been hailed by TSD Cleaning Services as a major step forward.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

(Newswire.net -- January 21, 2013) London, UK -- There is a keen focus this week in the cleaning sector on a new tool-kit that will take over the labelling of chemical substances. This new pictorial method of ensuring that workers and employers are able to easily see and understand the specific hazards of using each chemical has been hailed by TSD Cleaning Services as a major step forward.

TSD Cleaning Services offer a variety of cleaning services to clientele in and around the London area. These services include carpet and upholstery cleaning, deep cleans, building cleans, regular domestic cleaning, graffiti cleaning and more. Using chemicals as part of their daily work Anyclean understands the benefit of ensuring that everyone handling chemicals fully understands the risk factors any such chemicals possess and how to safely handle them.

Daniela Sarasakolva, the TSD Cleaning Services Operations Manager says, "We take health and safety in the workplace extremely seriously and are proud of our safety records. All of the employees in our company that are expected to handle any form of chemical cleaning agent has to attend mandatory COSHH training and in house induction. Further on-going training backs up this learning. We need to know that when sending our staff out on a job then they are safe, that members of the public are safe and that the correct chemicals where appropriate are used to ensure that a client receives the very best cleaning service".

The changes that the European Agency for Safety and Health at Work are implementing are fully backed by TSD Cleaning Services who state that they feel that a more universal and up to date approach to identifying chemicals is a very positive step as many find the currently system unclear. When considering the number of chemicals used on a daily basis, with up to 15% of Europe’s workers handling such chemicals as part of their daily work, it is important that the new system is properly integrated into the workplace.

Daniela Sarasakolva adds, “As always we will continue to work with the various health and safety agencies to ensure that both our workers and our clients may be confident that they are safe and that full steps have been taken to ensure that the TSD Cleaning Services safety record remains as unblemished as it is. As a company we care about our employees and will continue to stay on top of new developments regarding important safety matters”.

To find out more about any of the services that TSD Cleaning Services offer visit the website at http://www.tsdcleaning.co.uk or to call 020 8819 9476 for an informal chat, any queries about the use of chemicals during cleaning jobs or to receive a no-obligation quotation.

For Press and Interviews please contact:

Daniela Sarasakalova – TSD Manager / Operations Manager

TSD Cleaning Services

7 Atkinson Road
London
E16 3LP
020 8819 9476
https://plus.google.com/107131204074651237872/posts