(Newswire.net -- May 12th, 2013) Spokane, WA – Devon Mahdi releases information about the Amway Diamond lifestyle, qualification level, and dream that many Amway distributors aim to have.

Amway Diamonds work their way up from the trenches.

In today's new "relationship based economy" many people are flocking to Network Marketing to help them live their dreams. The grandfather of the industry and largest Network Marketing Company in history is Amway. A lot of folks in the network marketing industry have a lot of respect for "Amway Diamonds". Simply put "Amway Diamonds" are distributors who work hard to reach the top level of success in the company.

Though many people become "Amway Diamonds", maintaining the position take hard work, discipline, and focus. Maintaining "Diamond" status is more difficult than many people can imagine. Many people think of Amway Diamonds as the "bosses" or owners of the Amway network. Even though it's impossible to reach Diamond status without a ton of hard work and experience with the company, some people think they can work hard to get the title and have their work done for life.

The truth is, "Amway Diamonds" work just as hard as other distributors. While Diamond distributors have an abundant amount of cash flow, a Diamond isn't the pot of gold. Diamond status is a milestone of accomplishment but is not a reason to stop working hard. If a business owner wants to keep making money at the Diamond rank they have to regularly show plans to maintain their downline.

Realistically, reaching the Diamond level in Amway brings the risk of a person still having to trade their time for dollars. Once a distributor reaches Diamond, it's best for them to focus on developing leaders in their down line. Making the sort of money "Amway Diamonds" are famous for is about managing the people beneath you. The folks who have enjoyed real success at this level are, without exception, expert managers who concentrate on getting the most out of their recruits.

Amway may or may not be the best company for new business owners. Some find that an online direct sales approach is much more effective for them. The cautionary tale of "Amway Diamonds" appeals throughout the network marketing industry. People must not think life is going to get super-easy just because you reach some arbitrary level of network marketing achievement.
