“First Class Hero was just released last month and it’s already our bestselling book so far.” Continued Harmon, “We’re having a lot of fun with our 50k Celebration on our website and Facebook page. When you help us celebrate our success by posting and sharing on Facebook, YouTube, Pinterest and Google +, you earn points and each point is worth an entry in the random drawing on May 31st for a Kindle Fire, Amazon, iTunes and Google Play gift cards.

“My first romance novel was published in November of 2012 on a dare from a friend,” AJ explained. “And it has changed my life forever. I never thought it would actually sell or that I’d be able to quit my job and write romance novels for a living, but it did, I have and I do,” she laughed. “I’m having so much fun and I love interacting with my readers on social media. That’s why I’m celebrating with them on the internet.”

AJ Harmon’s success is a Cinderella story of its own. This wife and mother of two has always enjoyed reading a good romance novel and with a lot of hard work, planning and with just a little bit of luck, she has claimed a spot as one of 2013 Best New Contemporary Romance Authors and may very soon find herself on the New York Times Bestsellers list. Recently featured in an interview with Marketing Coach Ronnie Noize, Harmon credited her success to the emotional bond she creates between the reader and the characters in her books.

“If they can see just a little of themselves in the heroine and if reading my books makes them smile or give them hope, I’ve done my job.” Harmon concluded, “And that is worth celebrating. Please join our 50k Celebration and join the fun.”
