

BloggerDashboard Launches Cheap Web Hosting Review Guide for 2014

Michael Pearse December 06, 2013

With the new year just around the corner, many web developers and bloggers will begin the hunt for a new host for a fresh idea, prompting BloggerDashboard.net to put together a series cheap web hosting reviews for their updated 2014 guide.

(Newswire.net -- December 6, 2013) San Diego, CA -- While it is often assumed that bloggers who write professionally or as a hobby know exactly what web hosts would be the best for their needs, the opposite is true in many cases. These internet wordsmiths may know their way around a word processor, but that does not necessarily mean they know their way around web hosts nearly as well. Setting fonts, text size, italics and bolding is a relative cakewalk compared to the complexities behind choices like ASP, cPanel and PHP version requirements.

To address the concerns of online writers who fall into that camp, a fairly new site called Blogger Dashboard has put together a surprisingly concise and informative review guide titled "Top 10 Best Cheap Web Hosting Reviews For 2014". It is a veritable goldmine for those looking to find an honest collection of the some of the best web hosting reviews around.

Blogger Dashboard takes this level of trustworthy assistance to wide lengths as well. With numerous informational articles with topics like resume creation and job descriptions to important items that bloggers should have in their writer's toolboxes, the site prides itself on offering everyone access to a truly helpful array of data and suggestions. Likewise, as the site offers a dynamic presentation, users browsing on cell phones and tablets will have an easy time getting around the site, offering bloggers everywhere a chance to hone their skills whether at home or on the go.

Visitors to BloggerDashboard.net do not have to wait to see which cheap web hosts are going to be the best for 2014 as that previously mentioned guide is already prominently featured on the site's top menu bar on its browser-based layout. Likewise, the guide is broken into two helpful sections based on the users' locations. One focuses on web hosts for site builders in the United States and the other discusses hosting options for residents of the United Kingdom.

By offering so much vital information in a considerably brief multi-site review article, Blogger Dashboard has set itself apart from much of its competition by acting preemptively on an important issue and helping the uninitiated get their bearings in the oft-complicated world of web development. It is really no wonder the site is already in the top one percent of websites in the United States only a year after its creation.
