(Newswire.net -- May 27, 2014) Houston, TEXAS -- Texas Bugs-R-Us and Calvin Thigpen are pleased to announce that checking into licensing for pest control professionals is recommended when home and business owners are in need of bug eradication services. The pest control license indicates that the firm has taken the necessary training and testing to prove competency in the field. There are additional factors to be considered when choosing a professional pest control firm.

According to Calvin Thigpen, "When you have a problem with pests and need professional services, you want to be sure the service is exactly what is required for the particular pest. The issue should be addressed efficiently and quickly by a technician who is knowledgeable and experienced. We offer both prompt attention and courteous customer service. We encourage you to check our record of service from former customers. You can also check the Better Business Bureau for information about performance."

He continues, "Our technicians are licensed and insured for their protection and for that of our clients. A guarantee of the eradication of the pest is another component of our service that we are very proud of. We encourage those looking for eradication services to obtain two or three estimates before proceeding."

An understanding of which chemicals or procedures will be utilized in addressing the problem is helpful to homeowners. The least amount of product possible to control the pests is the best way to proceed. This practice is safer for pets and for the humans in the structure. Deaths from pesticide usage can be prevented when properly trained professionals apply the chemical products. Prospective customers are encouraged to ask about maintenance programs, once the original infestation is controlled.
