Last time the BC Lions won the Grey Cup was 2011. Will they do it again this year? Vancouver is in for an exciting season this year and fans were hopeful in the pre-season, winning both games against Edmonton and Calgary.

The Lions defense is looking good this year with some exciting interceptions and solid blocking from the back field. Their offence has serious potential with great running plays and heart pounding long bombs with exciting catches from the receivers.

Travis Lulay Back in Action?

Travis Lulay is preparing to get back in action again as of July 28th with an announcement he was ready to get on the field again. He isn't making any promises, but fans are hopeful he will be back for the remainder of the season to help drive the franchise forward for a chance at the cup.

After five regular season games, they are facing off against Calgary August 1st for their second contest against the league's leading team. The Stampeders are boasting four wins, no losses and the Lions are setting up to break their spirit and come home with a win. The western division is leading the league with the east coming up short the way we like it here in Vancouver.

An Exciting Team to Watch

BC Lions are always exciting and watching them play Saskatchewan August 24th will be great fun. The noise levels are off the hook and Vancouver fans really get into it when a pass is completed or another first down happens. The last time Saskatchewan was here for a game there was almost 33,000 people in the stands and the noise was deafening at the end when Vancouver beat them 26 -13. A real satisfying way to end the evening knowing we had beat the Rough Riders.

It looks like Winnipeg is the team to beat, leading the league with 10 points by August. Out of six games they only lost one to Edmonton July 17th. We are in for some exciting games over the next three months and thousands of eyeballs will be watching to see how the 2014 season unfolds. Hopefully BC will carry on into the playoffs again this year for a shot at the title.

Felions Partners

Sponsoring the BC Lions is an exciting way to get involved with the club, get some great community exposure and have fun setting everything up. Being at a game and seeing your company name on the sponsors list makes the game even more fun. We have had a blast when we've attended and will be at every game we can, schedule permitting.
