Cancer Patient Get Well Cards Introducing Lumpy Cards

Isabel Martinho March 11, 2015

Lumpy Cards the cancer get well cards are here founded by an oncologist nurse, who learned first-hand how important. As a breast cancer patient's daughter and tending to other cancer patients she was able to witness how hard it is to have a conversation (Newswire.net -- March 11, 2015) Los Angeles, California -- Cancer get well cards are here, when you find out a friend or family member has cancer the hardest thing about the whole situation at the start is knowing the right thing to say at such a difficult time. The situation is far from funny, but the truth is that humor is sometimes the best way to break the ice and make a dire situation seem a little less bleak and bring some relief to all of the dark thoughts that are natural in the beginning of the experience. Faced with a serious situation humor can bring a surprising time of relief and it won’t be what anyone is expecting.

Lumpy Cards is an amazing offering founded by an oncologist nurse, who learned first-hand how important humor can be. As a breast cancer patient's daughter and tending to other cancer patients she was able to witness how hard it is to have a conversation regarding the situation when a diagnosis of cancer had been received. As she spent time with patients in chemotherapy she developed a sensitive, caring manner that was able to lighten a somber time. She was also able to see that although the situation was a tough one, the opportunity to laugh was most certainly a welcome one to almost everyone.

When the battle looks its darkest you want to be the one to give someone a reason to smile and something to take their mind off of their disease, even if it's only for a short while. There is a Lumpy Card to fit almost every type of cancer so instead of sending another 'get well' or 'sorry to hear the news' card why not send one that will bring a smile or a chuckle with a cartoon on the front or a goofy picture of a cancer patient doing something unexpected? You might be the one that is able to deliver the only bright spot in a bad week. There are cards available that address almost every step of the cancer process from the diagnosis, steps of treatment, and side effects of chemotherapy and radiation.
When words fail you or you know someone who could use a little pick me up you can look through the offerings from Lumpy Cards and find one your loved one will appreciate.

Let your friend or relative know how proud you are of them and that you support them. Give the gift of laughter when it’s needed the very most.

Lumpy Cards

Los Angeles, California United States

(213) 534-8936
lexi@lumpycards.com
https://www.lumpycards.com/

Source: http://newswire.net/newsroom/pr/00087834-cancer-get-well.html