Green Relief Inc. discusses how cannabis oil can potentially be used as a cancer therapy drug. The company delivers medical marijuana in Orange County.

(Newswire.net -- July 14, 2016) Huntington Beach, California -- Green Relief Inc. talks about the great potential of full extract cannabis oil to be used in cancer therapy. Based in Southern California, Green Relief delivers high quality medical cannabis to medical marijuana patients. According to the company, recent studies have already revealed cannabis’ ability to kill cancer cells.

The use of medical cannabis to treat ailments was unheard of in the past—until scientific researches started showing that it can be safe and effective for individuals with real ailments. Researchers have found scientific evidence about the benefits of cannabis oil for cancer patients. According to several studies, the main ingredients of the cannabis plant, cannabidiol (CBD) and Tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), kill cancer cells without harming healthy cells. This makes it a strong contender, when considering options using chemotherapeutic agents, which are known to cause side effects by harming healthy cells, and nausea plus hair loss. Although further research is necessary, current researches have shown cannabis to be beneficial to cancer patients, both symptomatically and curatively, as well as patients with other ailments.

Green Relief Inc. (https://ocgreenrelief.org/) has been providing timely and exceptional service to California Proposition 215 medical cannabis patients for eight years now. With a primary focus on cancer, autism, insomnia and pain management help, the company has been recognized as one of the best alternative health sources in the industry and conducts business in accordance with California state law (SB420 and prop215). They also work with medical doctors to prescribe medical marijuana for several health conditions.
