(Newswire.net -- August 15, 2017) Dahlonega, Georgia -- GetUWired, a small business marketing firm, is excited to announce that it has been recognized in the Top Company Culture list of 2017, small-sized company category, by Entrepreneur Magazine for the second time. CEO and Co-Owner Melissa Allen has released an official statement conveying how special the award is for the company. "I am forever grateful to the brilliant people I get to work with on a daily basis. I'm honored and humbled to be a part of such an inspirational culture," she shares.

Every year, Entrepreneur partners with CultureIQ, a culture management platform, and they spend months searching for the best office cultures in America. Greg Besner, founder and CEO of CultureIQ, shares that the goal of the survey is to identify organizations that are worth learning from and to find out what makes them so good. He further explains that "A high-performance culture leads not only to employee engagement but also to measurable business results."

The candidates were scored based on 10 core qualities -- communication, support, collaboration, innovation, mission and value alignment, agility, wellness, work environment, responsibility and performance focus -- on a scale of zero to 100. GetUWired took home the award with a high score of 95.67. Out of the 153 chosen to make the list, it bagged the 13th spot, proving just how their employees love their jobs. And it's not the first time they won the inspirational award. GetUWired also landed a spot on Entrepreneur's Top Company Culture list in 2015 as well.

According to Jason Feifer, Editor-in-Chief of Entrepreneur, great company cultures are the result of great leadership. "There should be a conscious effort to make everyone on a team feel engaged and important," he adds. GetUWired embodies these qualities as seen through their core values. Employees consider themselves as a 'tribe' wherein they do everything as a team. The company strives to be a place people believe in and love.
