A veteran firefighter has launched a baby and small child rescue product to help give parents peace of mind and comfort in the event of a fire.

(Newswire.net -- February 3, 2018) -- A veteran firefighter has launched a baby and small child rescue product to help give parents peace of mind and comfort in the event of a fire. Baby Rescue allows children to be safely lowered 5 stories in an emergency.

A new baby rescue device has been launched by Rick Peters, a firefighter and paramedic, who wants to help save lives. Research shows there are more fires during the holidays, so it’s important to take every measure to protect children, and the new Baby Rescue product can help.

More information can be found at: http://mybabyrescue.com.

Baby Rescue is a rapid evacuation device that can be used to safely remove children from a two-story or higher building in the event of an emergency. This means that, if there’s a fire and parents are worried about getting their children to safety, they can use Baby Rescue to quickly and easily lower their kids to the ground.

Designed from the ground up to help save lives and protect children, it allows users to safely and efficiently evacuate babies or small children in the case of an upper floor fire. It was invented by a firefighter, manufactured by Safety International LLC, and patented in the USA.

The high quality design features the same materials used in the U.S. emergency response equipment, so customers know they’re getting the best product for their money. It is also water resistant on the outer later, with a safety top that closes securely to provide greater peace of mind.

Baby Rescue comes with a 60 foot grip line that is safe up to 5 stories, giving parents protection throughout their property. The soft design conforms to the baby’s body, with a breathable mesh section that can hold up to 75 pounds. This ensures that the baby or small child is kept comfortable, safe and secure while they are lowered to the ground. The non-slip grip line makes it easy to lower the child, and the entire rescue and evacuation process is fast and easy.

Lieutenant Rick Peters is a veteran firefighter, paramedic and father to four children. He has 28 years of experience in the firefighting business, and brought that to the forefront when creating his rescue product. Peters says he created Baby Rescue to give parents peace of mind and comfort in knowing that in the event of an evacuation emergency they have a fast, safe and easy way to get their babies to safety.

Source: http://newswire.net/newsroom/pr/00099853-https-mybabyrescue-com.html