(Newswire.net -- January 11, 2019) Orlando, FL -- While hair loss doesn't place one in a life-threatening situation, it could be a cause of embarrassment and some psychological issues. The good news is that certain remedies have actually been found helpful to individuals with this condition.

Research reveals that turmeric is a natural weapon against hair loss. This spice is a popular natural remedy in traditional Chinese medicine. In Ayurvedic practice, it is also utilized for a range of medicinal purposes.

Today, this spice is widely studied by clinicians and researchers due to the strong therapeutic potentials it could offer. It contains curcumin, which is a polyphenol believed to possess a range of therapeutic agents.

This includes anti-cytotoxic, antibiotic, antimicrobial, anti-purulent, immunomodulating, anticatabolic, anti-amyloidogenic, antiproliferative, antiviral, renoprotective, and anticoagulant agents.

It also has antibacterial, anticarcinogenic, antiseptic, antioxidant, insulin-sensitizing, androgenic, antifibrotic, genoprotective, antifungal, anti-inflammatory, neurorestorative, and metal-chelating properties.

According to research, turmeric, as well as its curcumin, may fight hair loss in several different ways. It has been found helpful in reducing stress linked with thinning hair loss, which can aggravate hair loss problems.

In lab studies, it was found that the extracts of turmeric inhibited type II-5a-reductase enzymes. This type of enzyme takes care of converting testosterone to dihydrotestosterone (DHT), which is a hormone that triggers androgenetic hair loss.

One of the best benefits of this natural remedy compared to hair-loss-fighting products is that it doesn't cause side effects. Some of the side effects typically caused by hair-loss-fighting medications are male infertility and erectile dysfunction.

The antioxidant and anti-inflammatory properties of turmeric, on the other hand, have been found to address underlying conditions that lead to hair loss, like seborrheic dermatitis. It is worth mentioning that this inflammatory, scaly scalp condition could result in temporary and permanent types of hair loss.

Today, there are many people who end up getting some diseases due to the chemicals found in some hair-loss treatments. Using curcumin could be an excellent choice, since aside from its ability to fight hair loss, it could also offer a range of therapeutic benefits.

VitaBreeze Curcumin formula is believed to be one of the most reliable sources of this natural remedy. It is highly potent, and is carefully crafted in a Good Manufacturing Practices (GMP) facility in the United States.

Further, this amazing supplement is made according to the high standards and strict guidelines set by the U.S. FDA. Pretty much everything that consumers want in a curcumin supplement can be found in this formula.
