(Newswire.net -- February 11, 2019) Wilmington, DE -- Wounds often heal on their own, but there are types that stay. There are even those that lead to infections, which may require the use of topical antibiotics.

According to dermatologists, it is important to understand that not all wounds need antibiotics. This is due to the fact that antibiotics have a potential to do more harm than good, and they may also be absolutely unnecessary.

Antibiotic use has long been associated with adverse effects. Antibiotics are not just found in food and the environment, but also in topical treatments.

It is important to understand that such medications have been found to be responsible for antibiotic resistance. Health authorities warn it is a major public health threat in many areas around the globe.

Cleaning up the wound is essential to reduce the risk of infection. The body actually has the ability to heal on its own, and this includes wounds.

When it comes to healing wounds, there are natural remedies like aloe vera found to be helpful.

For thousands of years, this medicinal plant has long been used in the treatment of burns, cuts, and other wounds. It has demonstrated its remarkable ability to heal, improve, and protect skin health.

Scientists carried out a review of four experimental studies. In this research, it has been found that aloe vera has been able to work by reducing the healing time of first or second degree burns.

Compared to the control groups, it has been able to decrease the healing process by nearly nine days. It has been found to work by speeding up skin cell reproduction by eight times.

According to Dr. Danhof of North Texas Research Laboratories, it also works by penetrating the epidermis four times faster than water.

Some topical solutions like DermaSafe Stretch Mark and Scar Cream have been found beneficial in delivering the wound-healing effects of aloe vera.

This aloe-vera-based superior moisturizer also contains Arnica, Cucumber, Elderberries, Wood Mallow, and Rutin.

It is not just specifically made to reduce the appearance of stretch marks and scars, but also deliver aloe vera's healing benefits.

DermaSafe Stretch Mark and Scar Cream is carefully crafted to be loaded with the wound-healing benefits of aloe vera. It is not just equipped with disease-fighting, health-enhancing nutrients, but is also free from nasty ingredients.

This includes binders, fillers, additives, GMOs, and preservatives. These are unwanted ingredients that many health experts warn consumers against.
