Las Vegas DUI attorney, Mace Yampolsky, releases a new review from a 2015 DUI client that got his life back after hiring Mace to represent him.

(Newswire.net -- October 6, 2015) Las Vegas, NV -- (The following is an actual message written by a client of Attorney Mace Yampolsky). The last year and a half have not been great for me. They were, in fact, the worst

I've seen- period. I had significant issues both personally and professionally. The issues I faced were not the norm for me and I made a mistake. It all came to a head one day and I succumbed to the stress, as many of us do at times. I found myself in a bad situation that I made worse. I needed someone to represent me in a DUI case. This had never happened to me before, I was at an age where it shouldn't be happening now, and the embarrassment as well as frustration with myself was significant.

I was lucky enough to have a good friend that recommended Las Vegas DUI attorney, Mace Yampolsky. On my first visit to his office Mace treated me with the utmost respect and understanding. I wasn't just another case for him, but a person that needed a thoughtful, experienced professional to help him through a complicated situation.

Mace took the time to clearly explain what I was facing, what would happen during this process, and what I could expect. He was honest, didn't sugarcoat anything, but also quickly identified the issues and exactly where we would concentrate our efforts. As you might expect I had a number of questions and Mace was always responsive, clear, and approachable. While I'm sure he is inundated with constant questions from many clients he was quick to respond every time I reached out to him.

Long story short my blood alcohol was over the legal limit and the final disposition Mace negotiated was a non-DUI decision. So as I bring this short story to a close, there is no DUI on my record, life is regaining a semblance of normality, and Mace Yampolsky helped me through a particularly difficult stretch in my life.
